

Browse on the move with detnews.com mobile

Log on today from your PDA, cell phone or other wireless, handheld device to find the latest:
• Breaking News • Weather • Sports • And more FAST, FREE SET-UP - CLICK HERE TO LEARN MORE

You be the Oscar judge!

detnews.com

Subscribe Now | Pay Bill | Place an Ad | Contact Customer Service | Contact The Detroit News

RSS | Email Newsletters | PDA

Search

Archive: Mon | Tue | Wed | Thu | Fri | Sat | Sun | Today

Home News Local Sports Autos Business Entertainment Lifestyle Opinion Classifieds Jobs Cars Real Estate For Rent Shopping
Editorial Columnists Editorial Cartoons Blogs Forums Cybersurveys

Columnists

RSS Feeds Email Headlines Text Alerts On Your PDA

JUMP TO SITE INDEX

Article Tools: Print Email Comment Text Size:  Save Share

Monday, February 4, 2008

Daniel Howes

Blues battle perception for changes

Health care giants struggle with change, too, and lobby hard for help managing it.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan, the $20 billion corporate behemoth loved by some and hated by others, is pushing a bill in the Legislature that would reform the way rates are set for individual health insurance coverage, the fastest growing sector in their business.

The move, under consideration in the state Senate, is one piece of a complex transition the Blues are engineering as Michigan's health insurance market shifts amid the restructuring of Detroit's automakers, an aging population, a decline in small business-funded insurance and exploding growth in individual health care policies.

Michigan Attorney General Mike Cox doesn't like the Blues bill, denouncing the proposal as "dramatic over-reaching" that puts "profits over people," would fatten executive salaries and reduce state (namely, his) oversight. AARP doesn't like it. Folks who've felt the sting of rising premiums or seen their employers cut coverage don't like it.

Advertisement The non-profit Blues aren't exactly hurting. A study by the Anderson Economic Group estimates the insurer will avoid paying $112 million in state taxes this year, a figure the Blues say should be offset by $307 million in "social mission" expenses it pays for uncompensated care, children and charitable giving.

Still, with cash reserves hovering around $2.8 billion, or 15 percent of total annual revenue, even the Blues' president and CEO concedes his company doesn't make a very convincing case of poor-mouthing.

Moving to stanch losses

All of which explains why Blues boss Dan Loepp, a onetime spokesman for the legendary state attorney general Frank Kelley, is conducting a lobbying campaign of his own. His is a company -- the fifth-largest Michigan-based company, measured by revenue -- in transition, and winning the right to better compete for individual policy holders is a key step in that transition.

The Blues, Loepp says, will lose $150 million on individual insurance plans this year in a segment expected to grow to as much as 20 percent of the health insurance business over the next 10 years, from 6 percent today. He wants the reform to allow them to compete fairly with for-profit insurers for individual business.

"You can't sustain" those losses, he told me in an interview from his office overlooking the Detroit River.

"For every $100 we collect, we're paying out $127 in claims in the individual market. That's a fact."

But that's not the only challenge facing the Blues, which employ nearly 10,000 across the state, insure 4.7 million Michiganians and have another million card-carrying clients across the country.

The insurer of first resort for Detroit's automakers and, by extension, the United Auto Workers, is facing a crucial transition from a model anchored by mega companies to one tied to shrunken automakers, fewer small business clients, more individual policies and the chance to compete for a new mega-deal -- the Big Three-funded retiree health care programs, called "VEBAs," to be controlled by the union by in 2010.

'It's a very unique time'

"I view it as a huge opportunity to bid on business and keep business," Loepp says, downplaying the potential influence of the UAW officials who sit on the Blues board. "We've had to go toe-to-toe with every major player in America and this gives us a chance to do it again. We're going to have to perform."

Good. Because with health-care liabilities measuring in the tens of billions, the UAW's VEBA business is likely to draw intense interest from big-money insurers looking for big contracts to manage. "There are an

Most Popular

Most Read E-Mailed Printed

Mayor's nonprofit accounts difficult to track
Brady at a loss in wake of defeat
Pistons thump Mavericks
Value City to ax 5 Mich. sites
Footage shows dutchman say Natalee
Holloway died
Economy drives up car loan defaults
Site tours next step at GM for 2-tier pay
Win record chase soon will be topic for Wings
GIANT SHOCK: Eli Manning's historic drive defies odds

Sell Your Car Fast!

Showcase your wheels to ready-to-buy shoppers with a newspaper and internet ad awful lot of people," Loepp jokes, "who found out where Solidarity House is and who didn't know about it before."

Yep. Few things focus business minds more than a pile of cash ready to be managed.

Adds CFO Mark Barlett: "It's a very unique time. Population aging. Baby boomers just entering retirement. It's never been more competitive. The amount of spending on health care is only going to go up."

Daniel Howes' column runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. You can reach him at (313) 222-2106, dchowes@detnews.com or detnews.com/howes.

Article Tools: Print Email Comment

In the Blogs...

Washington Bureau Blog

Deb Price: Republican state Rep. Tom Casperson's new fund-raising report suggests that, at least at this point, the one-time logger is trying to saw down a tall tree known as ...
Continued

Raging Bullard

George Bullard: Detroit's again a national laughing stock, thanks to Mayor Kilpatrick's unchecked passion. The hanky panky lit up YouTube with satire video, most of which can't be ...
Continued

Going Home

Michael Happy: A few years ago, while my family was living in New York City, my middle son, Shaun, licked a subway handrail. This was no off-the-beaten-path subway handrail; it was ... Continued

More blogs

MORE IN: COLUMNISTS

Jerry Green:: Super upset was destiny for overlooked team - 02/04/2008

Mekeisha Madden Toby:: ADS BOWL US OVER: Starting with 'Godfather' spoof, creative spots kept entertaining - 02/04/2008

Adam Graham:: Petty sticks to familiar hits - 02/04/2008

Chris McCosky: Around the NBA: Ex-Piston assistant Woodson doesn't deserve Atlanta heat - 02/04/2008

Dave Dye:: Spartans rolling except on road - 02/04/2008

Eric Lacy:: Incentive for U-M? Play for future - 02/04/2008

Terry Foster: Terry's Town: Blast is Detroit's overlooked gem - 02/04/2008

Mike O'Hara: Burning Questions: Big, but not the biggest upset - 02/04/2008

Daniel Howes: Blues battle perception for changes - 02/04/2008

Amber Arellano: Kilpatrick's cheap grace: An apology without action - 02/04/2008

Neal Rubin:: It doesn't take 20-20 sight to see need for organ donation - 02/04/2008

Deb Price: Michigan paper tries new ways to empower gays - 02/04/2008

Site IndexEssentials:

Home
Page One PDF
Sports PDF
Weather
Horoscope
Lottery
Crossword
Sudoku
Contact Us
Multimedia:
Photos/Video
News Photos
Autos Photos
Audio Galleries
Video
Photo Store

News:

Nation/World
Politics/Govt.
Elections
Religion
Local/State:
Metro/State
Wayne
Oakland
Macomb
Livingston
Commuting
Schools
Michigan History
Obituaries
Death Notices

Autos:

Autos Insider
Drive
Joyrides
Auto Shows
Auto Reviews
Auto Photos
Autos Talk
Test Drive blog
Business:
Business News
Personal
Finance
Stocks
Technology

Sports:

Sports
Lions/NFL
Pistons/NBA
Red Wings/NHL
Tigers/MLB
Shock/WNBA
MSU
U-M
More Colleges
High Schools
Golf
Motor Sports
More Sports
Ski Guide
Scoreboards

Entertainment:

Entertainment
Music
Calendar
Movies
Movie Finder
TV Listings
TV/Radio
Restaurants
Wine Report
Celebs
Performing Arts
Casinos
Puzzles/Games

Forums:

Forums Index
Lions Talk
Wings Talk
Pistons Talk
Tigers Talk
Ask Mike O'Hara
Big Ten Talk
News Talk
Autos Talk
Faith Talk
Opinions:
Editorials
Letter to Editor
Blogs
Columnists
Cybersurveys

Lifestyle:

Lifestyle
Homestyle
Food
Recipe Finder
Health/Fitness
Fashion/Shopping
Families/Parenting
Travel/Recreation
MichMoms
MichDads
Other
Special Reports

Special ReportsSpecial report: The foreclosure factory

Metro Detroit is a national center of the foreclosure crisis, leaving thousands of families financially ruined and depressing property values. - Nov. 26, 2007

The Detroit Institute of Arts: Your guide to the new DIA - Nov. 5, 2007

Detroit tax breaks go to the well-heeled - Oct. 31, 2007

South of the equator, Ford and GM prosper - Aug. 13, 2007

April 15 and you: Help with figuring out your taxes - Jan. 31, 2008

More Special Reports

© Copyright 2008 The Detroit News. All rights reserved.

Terms of Service | Contact | Help